Twin Pines Annual Meeting to Hear Plan on Greenbelt Theater

A plan to place the Greenbelt Theater under community control and sponsorship as a means of "reestablishing the theater as a top quality medium of entertainment" will be a chief topic of discussion at the annual meeting of Twin Pines Savings and Loan Association this Tuesday, March 28, at the Greenbelt Youth Center.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. with a 30-minute tour of the Youth Center conducted by Recreation Director Warren Leddick followed by refreshments. The annual report presented by President Bruce Bowman will open the formal part of the meeting at approximately 8:15 p.m.

In addition to the discussion on the theater, the meeting will feature a "Youth Wants to Know" panel with high school students having their say. Election for new members of the board of directors will be held, to be followed by a report on Twin Pines's successful effort to gain a special exception to new state legislation involving savings and loan companies.

The theater discussion, which will be led by Joseph Muller, will center around a proposal to form either a consumer co-op or limited dividend corporation subscribed to by the purchase of stock by individual citizens and perhaps local business establishments. As a cooperative, the shares would be around $30 for adults and $10 for children. This would pay no dividends but would entitle members to a reduced rate and entitle them to serve on picture selection committees.

A limited dividend corporation would require larger investments from civic-minded persons, who would get a limited return on their money only if the theater earned it.

Although the theater lease does not expire for several years, Greenbelt Consumer Services, the owner of the property, has indicated it would be willing to transfer the lease. The present theater manager has also indicated his willingness to sell his interest.

The proposal makes the assumption that the current dispute between management and the union can be settled. The community theater would employ a union projectionist.

A man and his wife were arrested by Greenbelt police and charged with disorderly conduct. They had been drinking and were causing a disturbance. Both were held overnight in jail in Hyattsville.

Two young men, "just horsing around," were responsible for a large window's being broken at Tanner's Cleaners. Damage was estimated at $150, which the young men paid for.

A little girl informed her parents that she was offered candy by a man in the vicinity of St. Hugh's. The child was frightened and ran from the man. Her parents reported the incident to police on Wednesday. On Thursday, the parents of a little boy who had been with the girl called to report the same story. Both children gave different descriptions, and police could not make any positive identification.

An alert resident on Gardenway spotted a possible "Peeping Tom" looking into the apartment windows on Crescent on Wednesday night. Police checked but could find no suspicious persons in the mentioned area.

An employee of Woody's service station saw a small child on Kenilworth Avenue near Greenbelt. After hearing the child's story, he notified police. The boy, eight years old, had walked from his home in N.E. Washington and had intended to find the Hot Shoppe at Bladensburg Rd. and New York Avenue in the District so that he could see his mother who was employed there. Somewhere en route, he took the wrong direction. The child's mother was called, and she came to Greenbelt and took the tired little boy home.

A 1959 Chevrolet Impala was reported stolen from a garage at 23 Ridge sometime Sunday night. Hub caps from a 1960 Chevy were stolen from 36 Crescent on Friday night. A resident on Fayette Place found a wheel and tire in his yard on Wednesday.

Animal licenses should be available at the police offices this weekend.

Coffee Urns Missing

GCS is searching for the three coffee urns that have disappeared from the Co-op Hospitality Room here. One has been missing for three months.

"These Urns were purchased by the Co-op and made available to local individuals and organizations on a loan basis with no charge," Co-op officials noted.

"Those who borrowed the coffee urns from Co-op should return them to Don Frenor, the store manager immediately, so that they can be made available for others to use."

Lastner Serves

Frank J. Lastner, 19P Ridge, Prince Georges County Commissioner, has added to his long list of civic services. He will serve as Chairman of the County and Municipal Employees Fund Drive for the American Cancer Society and was recently named chairman of the Health Welfare Committee of the Washington Metropolitan Regional Conference.

In accepting the former chairmanship, Mr. Lastner is quoted as saying, "I have been associated with Public Health and its associated problems all my life and am very concerned with research and progress in this area."

Lastner has represented our county on the Washington Metropolitan Regional Conference since the formation of the organization in 1957. He also serves on the Fiscal, Legal and Personnel, and Publicity Committees.

by ISADORE PARKER

Attorney Abraham Chasanow argued his case for the permission of left turns from Centerway to the East parking lot, before the city council last Monday night. He gained a favorable verdict because of a hung jury. An ordinance barring such turns was inadvertently omitted from the original ordinance reversing the flow of traffic on Centerway and providing for channelization of traffic movements.

Small Excess Shown in GHI Fiscal Report

By AL SKOLNIK

Primarily as a result of increased expenditures for maintenance and repairs, the 1960 excess of income over expenditures for Greenbelt Homes, Inc. was the smallest experienced since taking over from the Federal government in early 1953.

In a fiscal statement prepared by GHI comptroller Roy Breaux, total income of $1,211,500 and total expenses of $1,194,600 were reported, leaving an undistributed surplus before allocation to reserves of $16,900.

This compares with excesses or net gains of $50,000 in 1959 and $59,200 in 1958, after excluding non-recurring items such as profits from the sale of the undeveloped land and costs of water meter installation.

If the amount budgeted for contingency reserves of $30,000 were included in the 1960 expenditure figures, then the fiscal statement would show an actual deficit for 1960 of $13,100. Contingency reserves are set aside each year to cover unusual costs, such as a re-roofing program, water meter installation, and heat, maintenance, and tax expenditures when the operating reserves for these items are depleted.

Monthly income from members and tenants during 1960 was up $7,200 from 1959 (including members' principal payments), primarily as the result of the increase in monthly charges that went into effect at the beginning of the year. Expenditures incurred with respect to the operation of the housing units also increased during 1960 -- by $32,100.

Repairs and maintenance showed the largest single increase from 1959 to 1960 ($39,100). Contributing greatly to this rise was the accelerated exterior trim paint program, which cost $28,800 more in 1960 than in 1959. The initiation of a gutter guard program costing $5,000 in 1960 was another contributing item.

The only other item which showed a significant increase was city and county taxes. They amounted to $239,300 in 1960, up $6,400 from the year before.

Offsetting these rises was a drop of $2,200 in heating costs and $2,200 in administrative and board expenses. The drop in these items was due in part to the fact that income from sources other than monthly charges covered a larger amount of administrative and heating expenses in 1960 than in 1959, leaving a smaller amount to be charged against members' housing costs.

All other expenditure items showed differences of less than $1,000 in the two years.

Income from non-operating sources such as services sold, members, sales commissions, garage rents, and interest on savings in 1960 increased $12,700 over 1959 income, while expenses incurred in connection with these items increased $15,400 during the year.

phlet, "Geography and Planning in the Urban Community," which has recently been published by the University of Maryland.

Chasanow declared that the "no left turn" was preventing his clients from reaching his office, or required them to go a considerable distance in unfamiliar patterns. Also, he stated, the conversion of Centerway to a parking lot was a violation of the original dedication of the streets by the federal government.

Mayor pro-tem Tom Canning informed Chasanow that the changeover was on a trial basis and not intended to hurt anyone. Edgar Smith, councilman, urged a written legal opinion from the city solicitor before any action on the ordinance be taken. Councilman Dave Champion stated that a left turn could be made now by turning sharply after reaching the end of the barricade.

After council amended the ordinance to permit left turns on Sundays, Chasanow reminded council that scarcity of traffic between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. should invite a further amendment to include those hours. The council then amended the ordinance to permit left turns every day from 9 to 4. The amendment put the ordinance back into first reading, and further consideration required a waiver of the rules. A motion to waive the rules failed when it did not get unanimous approval of the council, Smith dissenting.

Legally, the ordinance permits left turns from Centerway to the East parking lot... at least until the next council meeting. However, city manager Charles McDonald informed the NEWS REVIEW Tuesday night, that the barricades will remain. "I am guided by the intent of council," he asserted, "and the intent of the city planning board which proposed the change."

Streets Under Repair

City maintenance crews are going ahead with the road repair program as authorized by council at a recent special session. First to be repaired have been the largest individual areas--those measuring at least 10 by 60 feet. As of last Tuesday, all of these spots in the roadways had been repaired.

The largest sections of winter-damaged roads occurred in the North End, according to city manager Charles McDonald. He attributed this fact to the relative thinness of the original road base -- a material called soil cement. These roads were laid some years after those at the other end of town.

The single largest repair job occurred near 11 Court of Research. It stretched across the width of the road and was about 70 feet long. Other large areas repaired were at Ridge between Plateau and Laurel Hill, Northway at Hillside, and at 12 Court on Hillside. Somewhat smaller areas were patched on Lakeside Rd., Woodland Way, and Greenhill Rd.

Work on repairing all small potholes will continue until the roads are again in good condition.

Persistence

To the Editor:

I have to admire the persistence of the CHI Board of Directors, but I do wish they would channel their energies toward the purpose for which they were established and elected. Housing for the elderly, a motel, a restaurant, a baseball field, etc., all sound very nice, but only by the wildest stretch of the imagination do these things come within their purview. It seems to me they ought to be spending their time in trying to cut costs and creating a more efficient operation for the benefit of their members, instead of dreaming up grandiose schemes which are really not their business at all.

HARRY ZUBKOFF

Hearsay Issue

I would like to comment on Mr. Robert Hull's letter appearing a few weeks ago, in which he took to task the author of a previous letter objecting to the action taken at the recent CHI meeting to evict a member. Mr. Hull charged that the writer of the letter was basing her judgment only on hearsay evidence since she had not attended the meeting. It appears relevant to inquire if Mr. Hull had firsthand knowledge by actually observing the events surrounding the eviction or whether Mr. Hull also relied on the hearsay evidence disseminated at the membership meeting.

When The SIREN BLOWS

By RITA FISHER

On Sunday morning, the Greenbelt men and equipment were called to a house fire in Glenn Dale. A family had recently moved into the house, which had been unoccupied for five years. The woman of the house saw a fire in the brush near by and ran outside with a pail of water to try to put it out. She looked around and saw the roof of the house on fire. The fire board was called but the house was burning too fiercely to save it. No one was injured. Four companies responded to the call.

Residents called the fire board and reported that there was smoke coming from the rear of the Co-op store on Sunday. Since the Co-op is a large place of business, the call went out as a box call and many fire companies were called to the scene. There was no fire. It was only condensation from the blowers and on some days, when the wind is right, it looks as though there's a fire.

I must add a bit to the item about the Baby-sitters course scheduled for the middle of April. Names of those who complete the course may be kept on file for references. Anyone interested in taking this course can call me at 6787 or Chief Reynolds at 4372.

Births up in County

The County Health Department reports in 1959, our birth rate in this county was 17% higher than that for the state of Maryland, and 24% higher than that for the United States as a whole, while the death rate was 40% lower than the United States rate. This may be explained by the fact that the population of Prince George's County is younger and more transient than that of most communities. The younger the population, the higher the birth rate and the lower the death rate.

Father Is Important, Claims Family Expert

Father is the masculine pattern within the home. Children live much of the day under feminine influence and need the masculine viewpoint. Boys learn the role from their fathers and girls learn what to expect from other men who will come into her life.

In school, children usually have feminine teachers. It's within the home that children learn father's role--husband, father, a member of the work world and a citizen within his community.

The emotional atmosphere that father helps create within the home is very important, says Jeanne S. Moehn, extension family life specialist at the University of Maryland.

His attitude toward his wife is especially important to family security. If he regards her as a person worthy of approval and consideration, he will help create an atmosphere of security and happiness for members of his family.

Early in life, a child needs to know that both his parents love him. Father helps the child to know the world as a friendly place. This means listening to the small child's problems and giving sympathetic guidance.

Encouraging a youngster who is trying to learn helps him progress toward further successful achievements as he grows older. Too much criticism often discourages learning.

There is a definite need for father's help in discipline. He can be firm, yet considerate. He can help young children to accept natural causes for their behavior.

With all his responsibilities, father is a person in his own right. He needs time to pursue his hobby or interest. Mother and children need to recognize this right.

Remember that father is the masculine pattern for his youngsters.

Behind Locked Doors

By RITA FISHER

Our February visit to our friends in Ward CT-6 at St. Elizabeth's was quite fruitful. Two things happened that I will long remember.

We were standing around the piano singing, while the other women were setting up the refreshment table. At first we couldn't find the little song book which I had brought a few months before. One of the patients, a woman who never plays Bingo and usually sits on the floor near the same radiator month after month, told me that it might be around because the women sing from it once in a while. We did locate it and started singing. We came to the part in the song book that contained favorite hymns, and one hymn really hit home with this woman. She got up and stood with us and sang and waved her hand as if directing us. She really enjoyed herself as she sang with us. Well, I guess almost everyone in the room was as thrilled as we were to see her get up and join us in something. Everyone applauded. She sat down again and listened as we sang other songs. Then we sang, "My Country, 'tis of Thee," and she again sang with us.

Usually this woman seems unaware that we are even in the room when we play Bingo. When we first arrive, we usually try to greet each woman in the room. She has become sociable enough to say hello to us, but that's about all. She usually has a "gay" time in a little world of her own, talking to herself and gesturing as she does so. She does perk up and accept refreshments, though, especially when it's chocolate candy or cake.

Then there's our seemingly silent friend. She is the one who seems to be deaf but who at one time spoke to me in a soft, sweet voice until she saw a nurse pass by, at which time she again acted deaf. One of the women who has been coming with us for quite a long time now took an interest in Miss G., our deaf lady. Well this woman has been unable to come with us because of ill health. I happened to turn around while we were singing and there was Miss G. talking and nodding her head. One of our other ladies was sitting with her, listening intently as Miss G. spoke. When I asked her later about it, she said Miss G. was telling her that she missed her friend and that she had received a nice Valentine card from her. It certainly makes the day worth while when you see someone have enough confidence in the work you are doing to "open up" and break through the barrier that separates sanity and insanity, even if it is only a little thing really. To every one in the group I have been going with for over two and a half years, there is reward for us when we gain a patient's confidence.

Our friend, Mrs. F., who had been seriously ill and then transferred to another ward when she was well enough, was brought up to be with us during the party. She looked a little thin but well enough. She is another of those women who seem to be out of place in this hospital. A new woman, coming with us for the first time, was sure that Mrs. F. was a completely normal woman. We then told her how Mrs. F. had said odd things once in a while in the past. Many of these patients are like that. Their minds sometimes are so clear and alert and yet somewhere along the way, their ideas become strange and unbelievable. I can remember such instances with patients who seem so well: the woman who said to me once that she always washed her hands after playing Bingo because there was poison in the wood of the table she was playing at; the one who asked me to have the ladies stop giving prizes because these items were actually the property of her ancestors who were dead for hundreds of years but who were hurt and crying because we were giving these things away; and Mrs. F., who would not play Bingo unless "He" told her that she could.

Our supply of trinkets and cosmetics seems to be dwindling down. I am therefore making an appeal to the readers to help us help the ladies of St. Elizabeth's by donating your old but usable costume jewelry and half empty bottles of toilet articles. And smelly soap, oh, how they love it. So different from what they have at the hospital. And large size shoes. Please? Just call Mrs. Bernice Mixon at GR. 4-6059 and she can tell you what we need.
